

2018

Rokia could not marry the father of her child because of opposition from his family. He is Muslim and she is Catholic. She's been raising the boy alone, living in what could only be called poverty conditions. This year she will complete three years of training in a nursing school in Bobo Dioulasso. She has had good grades.

Rokia holding a book that we gave her for her son, Mohammad.

2017

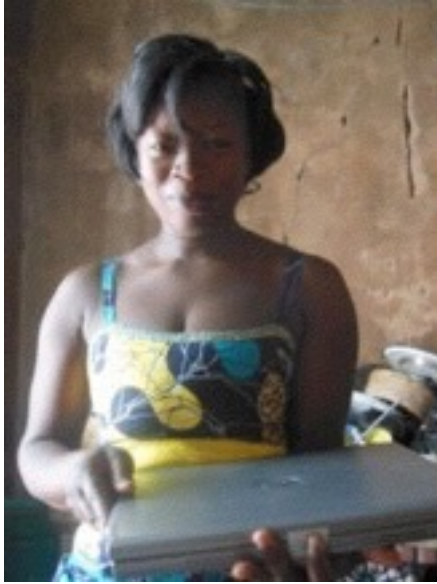

Rokia Sanogo is in her second of a three-year nursing program. Her average the first year was an impressive 16/20. She has a five-year-old son but couldn't marry his father because of family opposition based on religion. She's highly motivated and doing well. (Recommended by Odile Pagezy.)

With Dr. Traoré, Director of our Health Fund, January 2017.

2016

Rokia Sanogo goes to the same nursing school as Mouniratou and is also in her first year. She lives with family (her mother died in childbirth in 2004; her father works in the Ivory Coast). She has a son, whose father visits often but they could not marry because of family opposition (she is Muslim, he is Catholic).

Rokia, proudly holding the computer we gave her.