Zenabou is our only illiterate beneficiary; she can neither read nor write. But she's great on a sewing machine; she is enrolled in a three-year program leading to a certificate as a seamstress. Her parents are farmers who live too far from the school, so she lives with an aunt. She's Christian, her aunt is Muslim, but everyone gets along fine in Burkina Faso.

Zénabou Kabore is in her first year of dressmaking at Noëlie's atelier. She's the fourth of six children. Her parents, who are subsistence farmers, couldn't afford her tuition of about $60 a year. Noëlie asked us if we could help. Zénabou seems motivated. We went for it.
