

2018

Fayssatou's father was a hospital administrator who died suddenly on the job. Her mother supports her three children selling a kind of yogurt. From a young age, Fayssatou told her father that she wanted to be a mid-wife. She is now in her second year of a three-year nursing program and doing well. We pay only her tuition; her mother pays the rest.

2017

Fayssatou is in the first of a three-year training program in nursing ; she wants to be a midwife. Her father, who passed away many years ago, had worked as a hospital administrator, which might help her get a job. She has no grades yet. (Solidarité/Lambert Djigemde)

Fayssatou, her mother and her brother, January 2017.

2016

Fayssatou Kagone failed her Baccalaureate exam twice, but passed an entry exam at a state nursing school, for which a “Bac” isn’t required. She is starting the first of a three-year program.

