

2018

We helped Pascaline Y by accident. We interviewed her for financial aid thinking she was someone else. In the end, we didn't have the heart to tell her it was a mistake. She will begin her third year sometime this year (the university is almost a year behind) meaning she will not get her Licence degree in modern languages before 2019.

2017

Pascaline Y is in her second year of a Licence program in modern languages. The University of Koudougou is badly behind; her first year didn't finish until February 2017. Her average for that year was 10.75/20, not very strong. (She was chosen by error.)

With her father, mother and one of her sisters, January 2017.

2016

Pascaline (“the wrong one”) Yameogo signed up to study languages at the University of Koudougou. When a teacher’s strike was finally resolved after five months, she began her first year of study in early February. She will study four languages: English, French, Dioula (spoken around Bobo Dioulasso) and Mooré (language of the majority Mossi).

Pascaline Y, right, bored waiting for classes to begin.